

Three Great Gift Ideas

I know. I know. The last suggestion you want right now is for gifts, but as thoughts are on the new year today, there are three great gifts you could give your children this year.

The first gift you can give is a better marriage between their parents. To give your child a mom and dad that love each other and are committed to each other is priceless. Twelve months of working to improve your marriage is a gift for which they will be always thankful. The second gift you can give is more of your time and attention, which may mean you cannot afford as many toys for, but they will always treasure this gift. The third gift you can give is spiritual training. Take God's word and live it in your own life, teach it diligently to them, and train them in the way they should live.

If you can diligently give these gifts, your children will thank you into eternity. In fact, they may look back at this year's gifts as the best ever.

Adapted From Lonnie Oldag