

What Is The Biggest Contribution?

In a poll conducted late last year, the Barna Group found that most Americans believe that Christians have made positive contributions to American society during the past few years. One out of every five adults (19%) mentioned how Christians in the United States have helped poor or underprivileged people to have a better life. One out of every six adults (16%) said that evangelism contributed the most to a better society. The third most common contribution, by one out of every seven adults (14%), listed was shaping or protecting the values and morals of the nation. Christians are to live as lights in the world (Matthew 5:13-16; Philippians 2:15). We have to make sure that we continue to do it!
