

What Is Your Life?

One of two brothers died, and when he died, an obituary was placed in the newspaper. By mistake they printed the living brother's obituary. He read his own obituary and about him it said, "The inventor of dynamite." His name was Alfred Nobel -- and reading it changed his life. He decided to be remembered for contributing to peace and the rest is history.

If any of us were to see our obituary in the paper, what would it say? What would be your mark in history? We have great one-line descriptions of New Testament people. Andrew brought his brother Simon to Jesus. Demas loved this world. Dorcas made clothing for her friends. Jesus went about doing good.

Think for a moment about what you would want to be remembered by -- can that be said today? If not, why don't you start now to change the direction of your life? There are a many ways we could word the way in which we would all want to be remembered, but Jesus stated it best in Matthew 25:21, "Well done thou good and faithful servant ... enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."
